The Android market continues to grow, new phones are apparently coming every bearer, but always finding the Mareas laws, we always welcome your suggestions for useful, productive or simply fantastic Android apps in the comments. Strid which puts Astrid apart from the numerous comments, many tasks / doing manager outside? Two great features. One is its seamlessly synchronization with cloud-based task manager remembers the milk, which can happen in the background or when you press "Sync". The other is the powers of her annoyed to turbo. Astrid is positioned in the notification area when a task is due and literally forces you to head to the task of getting rid of that small icon similar to a squid. It is right to "hit" clear notifications "will not kill yours to do, and when you arrive at the main screen of Astrid, it opens the thing that needs to do with a rotating phrase, how to" do it and you feel better "or" six Ready, Tiger? "This may seem annoying to some, but those whose inches are ready to put things, Astrid is just the right kind of care. Finally, if you are throughout the geolocation thing, Astrid can connect to local, the fantastic Responsible for the conditional telephony quoted in a previous rounded Android, to do things like remind you of buying stamps when you are close to a post office, or abandon those clothes in the trunk every time you are around for a good will. Six months ago we stressed the best Android app to increase your mobile productivity, but since the molesnapphoto needs to say that Snapphoto is no more stable applications. When it works, though, adds a rotation of Geek Tools photos to your camera with a top panel slide- OUT, ISO controls, automatic or custom white balance, stabilizing software, effects and effects and, perhaps more useful, are available Itables a timer, along with quality modifiers and size. The consent and the personal experience of the auditors find that the app becomes less stable plus shots, but to extract a key frame with the phone, it is definitely worth the price. acastit is a complete full podcast client for Android e a, ~ "Not an easy thing to find. Sports a few small ads that run along the bottom of the screen, but they are far from intrusive. Acast can search for popular podcast databases to find your feeds podcasts or accept the rumets of the manual and manual e It allows you to configure if you update, download, or transmit shows only to a Wi-Fi network or via a cellular network. The app Podcaster allows the automatic queuing of downloaded items, but the happy ones with your own music player Minimal Android (assuming that exist) can simply play their normal tracks. Make sure you hit the Achat flush settings menu to customize how and when your shows are demolished from the The "Donut" revision network of Net.Rounded Labs' Toggle WidgetSwen Android, users will have a dedicated widget for changes to settings with click. Meanwhile, rounded laboratories offer five separate widgets to a square that simply turn on Wi-Fi, Bluetooth, GPS and your phone turned on or off, and changes the brightness of the screen with each faucet. The GPS widget actually sends you to a settings dialog to click once again and deactivate the GPS, but two clicks are decidedly better than four.google has fallen new code for the Android donut and looks too good to be real. People in xda e a, ~ | | Not the first app that finds the stuff around you using the GPS or Wi-Fi position, but it could be the most personalized. Sherpa's results arrive in a family layout of the map or a revolving "carousel" and are filtered within the time of day ... it theoretically won't send you to a dry cleaner at 3 AM unless it is a point of 24 hours. Sherpa "Learn" from what you have previously selected, so that you have caribA' cafes when you are visiting Raleigh if you looked for them in Atlanta. It could bear to move a little faster, but it hooks the Native map, e-mail and location utensils and could simply discover something new for you right in front from where you are standing. Government manager - Local A½if Customization and multipart settings are a bit too much for your needs and you just want your phone not playing at night and buzz while you're at work, Sound Manager is what you should grasp. The basic screen allows you to set individual volumes, so notifications are silent while Ringtones are audible, for example. The planning functionalities are where it is, since, since most of the US work, sleep, eat, and make other ritual activities that we would prefer not to interrupt them from new direct messages from Twitter or emailed to Amazon Speht Alerts. PDANET for AndroidWe said this combo for Windows / Android combo before, but it is worth noting again because it works again, and it is still probably the easiest way to transform a 3G / edge connection into a connection of the last resort for Your laptop. Non-collaborative restaurants and redemption thrust airports can be bypassed with a simple connection click on both the phone and on a Windows taskbar entry. The bumber is that it requires a USB cable connection between the phone and the computer, but otherwise it provides a decent decent decee for low bandwidth need. (Original post) Android / Windows: PDANET makes the software that makes the Tethering type of iPhone-to-laptop easy. Android Android Applications for iPhone, the counterpart for iPhone, the Amazon app can "remember" whatever you make a picture and sends with a reasonably surprising accuracy. Where the Android app exceeds it in its barcode scanning capacity. If an element you want to save in a wish list, suggest to a friend, or note for your purchase later it does not photograph well or can not be found by Amazon, the code will almost always barring the nail on the head. Whatever you do in the app you also noticed in your Amazon account, then create an excellent manufacturer of lists, regardless of whether or not you have time to hold right into the store. (Original post) iphone / ipod touch only: Amazon released a new mobile application for iPhone and iPod touch a a, ~ | Theatrastro files Managersastro is one of those apps you want it has not been necessary, but they are pleased with a developer took the time to whip up. It is fundamentally a serious file browser, one that can download (almost) any file you find a URL for, pass files to your SD card along the Gmail client for connection, find files that can't seem to look at your reader Musical or film Find yourself (enter ignorant here) and back up downloaded applications in your SD card. You will not use it too often, but you will be glad it is there when you need it Defuresokay, so you can theoretically call this a goofy price a turned object on a list of nine perfectly productive apps. But that theory assumes that you will never be blocked in an unbearably long line, the terminal or a car ride, and wants to desperately engage in a small one Similar to tower defense with a tron-capture style graphics. The free version contains only a level with normal difficulty, but it is more than enough to keep the casual defender fascinated. From the greatly wide test, this does not seem to be so much of a drainage of the battery like other Android games. The existence of the smartphones of the reason is so we can be more productive. The tiny super computers are placed that we keep in our pocket. They connect to the web, let us work, and we always have them on us. This makes them first before To help us be a little more productive. There are a lot of options for apps that can help you be more productive in your life. Take a look at the best productivity apps for Android! Evernote is a powerful app to take an app. It was among the most popular apps of his class for years and has the chops to justify these praises. It is equipped with audio, text, image and various other types of notes. There are also excellent organizational characteristics, synchronization of the cross-section, collaboration functionality and more. There isn't much wrong with it. However, you pay for all those functionality. A base plan applies for $ 7.99 a month with the full experience that goes for $ 14.99 a year. Google Keep is another great note to take the app that is completely free if you also want a kind option. Price: free / $ 1.99- $ 99.99 Per month The Google Drive suite is an extraordinary series of productivity apps. Get regular office things like Google documents, sheets and slides along with Cloud Storage in Google Drive. Also, there is an autonomous PDF player from Google together with Google Keep Notes, a simple but effective note. Get 15 GB for free and you can pay for more storage space. There are few productivity app suites on mobile phone that work as Google Drive. Joe Hindy / Android Audionfitt is one of the most interesting productivity apps available on Android. The app lets you create recipes that tell various apps to make various things in various moments. It essentially takes almost no task and makes your phone do it independently. This is a must-have for those who use things like intelligent lights and other IoT devices. Also, you can do fast things like self-save your Instagram photos from Dropbox. It is powerful, but there is a learning curve. You can find a variety of pre-made recipes with some simple Google searches. Tasker is another excellent app for this type of stuff, but IFITT is a bit easier to use. Price: free / $ 24 for annoslastpass is not just one of the best productivity apps, but also one of the best security apps. Store your login credentials for various sites. So use it to log in. With it, you can find more complex passwords, login more quickly, and you don't have to remember your password for each site you use. This takes pain out when it comes to doing things like that. There is also an Authenticator Lastpass app that adds an additional level of security. The free version of the app covers most bases, but you will need $ 24 subscription a year to get all the features. The Microsoft apps shows all the apps that Microsoft has on Play Store. Included is a variety of apps that can increase productivity, including OneDrive, Microsoft Word, Excel, PowerPoint, OneNote, Outlook, Microsoft to do (app to make app) and many others. Very like Google Drive, this is a suite of apps that work together to bring you a cohesive experience. There are also apps like Microsoft Remote Desktop that allows you to dial your Windows PCs from your Android phone. There are also a ton of apps and all have Windows support. It's a good way to combine mobile and desktop experiences for those where rock windows. Pushbullet is one of the classic productivity apps. Helps to fill the gap between your phone and your computer. You can do things like answering text messages, send files and even configure channels to get notifications on specific things. It should work on Mac, Windows and even Linux. This makes it a good solution for almost someone. The free version offers you a taste of the features. In this way you can try them. You should go to Pro to get unlimited quantities of everything. AIRDRIDO AND AIRMIRROR are great alternatives to Pushbullet. Price: free / 6.67- $ 12.50 per user for monthack is easily the best business chat app currently available. Supports text and voice chats. There is also integration for Google Drive, Asana and other productivity apps. Productivity. You also get support for Giphy in case you want a little. You can make a virtually unlimited number of channels. In this way the teams can go out and talk about their projects individually. It really so powerful. Moreover, smaller teams can demonstrate the app for free for as long as necessary. The price plans vary and are easily visible on the official Slack website. Price: Free Trial / $ 2.99Solid Explorer is a must for file management on your phone. It has a simple user interface with lots of functionality, including many niche features. Works with zip, rar, 7zip and tar archives. The app also connects directly to Dropbox, Google Drive, Box.com and many others. Finally, it works with FTP server, WebDav and more. You can also get root access things if you have a rooted device. The free trial shows you how the app works and a single purchase in-app $ 2.99 gives you everything. Yes, it's so good. Price: free / $ 27.99 a year is one of the best list to do. It allows you to quickly and easily organize tasks, chores, lists, things and more. The app has a clean interface, simple controls and synchronization of the cross device. It also comes with a calendar, a widget, notifications for reminders and customizable tasks with repetition. It also has shareable tasks for things like domestic chores or tasks between work colleagues. The free version has most of the above features mentioned. The paid version is fundamentally optional. It is certainly one of the best productivity apps. Drawing invoices as a virtual side. The idea is to help you stay organized at home and at home. Do this is a good manager of the cheap. You can create what they are called boards to help keep your various projects organized and each table allows you to work on a task at a time. The app allows collaboration with collaboration and friends that makes it ideal for a working environment or family. It also comes with Google Drive, Dropbox and the support of the wear operating system. It is completely free to use forever. This makes it one of the large productivity apps on a limited budget. Asana is another excellent option if you don't mind paying for this and the Boorehub is a decent and an eccentric in this space. Price: free / up to $ 1.99 (varied) The forest is a different type of productivity app. Sometimes you need to get off your phone and concentrate more at work. Apps like the forest can help. Basically you give you a reason not to use the phone. The app grows a tree that dies if you use the phone. Collect various trees while progressing through the small game. Google has implemented a similar idea with their digital wellness app and YouTube also has a timer. We also like a lot 5217, an app that is at a time for 52 minutes followed by a 17 minute break. It is an interesting genre of apps that can help increase your productivity if you find the right one. Joe Authority Authority Hindy / Android
