Abstract- The main purposes of this paper is to explore the significance of emerging technologies for engaging and enhancing interactive eLearning. We begin by highlighting the characteristics of the new Interaction Age that suggest a shift in the creation, usage and applications of digital content. We review a set of technologies and trends such as Google Applications, Cloud computing, Virtual Reality, and ubiquitous learning via iTunes U using mobile devices. These technologies are among those at the leading edge of innovation and hold promise for the future of higher education. We also argue that these technologies must enhance student engagement and interaction in the increasing use of virtual learning environments (VLEs).

Keywords- Engaged Learning, Emergent Technologies, Google Apps, iTunes U, Interactivity & Virtual Learning Environment (VLE)

1. INTRODUCTION

With the beginning of this new century eLearning has emerged as a new technology for delivering online, hybrid, and synchronous learning regardless of geographical location, time of day, or digital reception or devices in use today. This paper includes a brief discussion of reasons why the educational institutions and enterprises are turning to eLearning to engage learners with new ideas and new knowledge.

According to two researchers Jennifer M. Brill and Yesneung Park (2008) working at Virginia Tech, USA the application of a variety of technologies for learning and teaching is being influenced by two significant forces: the realm of technological innovation (especially, today, in regard to hardware and software, including new Learning management Systems (LMSs) and the realm of learning theory. In consideration of the realm of technological innovation, learning has evolved from textbooks to television to computers, and now to mobile digital devices, in a relatively very short span of time. In respect to the realm of learning theories, expansions of technologies have provoked a broadening of learning paradigms (e.g., behaviorism, cognitivism, and constructivism) toward more self-directed, contextualized, and interactive learning environments and approaches. Rapid developments in the new ways of knowing and new ways of learning have evolved against a backdrop of society's evolution from an Industrial and Information Age to the current Interaction Age dominated by emergent technologies [1].

According to Milne (2007), the society is extending from the Information Age into the Interaction Age [2]. In the Information Age, the role of digital content is broadened as something around which people engage and interact. The Table 1 provides a summary of Milne's analysis regarding the shift from Information Age to Interaction Age in terms of networks, devices, interfaces, and user focus. To summarize
