So you just got a new Android phone. You detach him, you take off the plastic film and turn it on for the first time. Then you add your Google account and you end up setting it up. Now is the time to download some applications! But if you're new to the Android ecosystem, you may not be quite set in which apps you're going to download. You may be overwhelmed by a lot of options on Google Play, or you may be just undecided between several options. Don't worry, we're here to help. Today, we will highlight some apps that each Android user should have in 2021. Some are newer applications, while others are older and more popular. We have classified this list with at least three options for each category. Browse this guide: Essential applications We will start with some applications that are essential to improving your Android experience, such as VPN applications or password managers. These applications don't exactly fit into any of the categories we'll mention later, but at least in my opinion, they are very useful to have and are sure your Android experience best. I always install the first three apps on any Android device I tested, in fact. To allow you to better manage your apps to automate your entire Android experience, these are definitely worth a look, no matter if you are a normal user or an enthusiast. Solid Explorer Solid Explorer is the ultimate file browser application. It's one of the best browser applications there — if not the best — and it's because it allows you to do so much. It has built-in encryption to encrypt your important files, features the integration of Google Drive and Dropbox, with support to connect to your own external server and easy file management with support to explore other partitions of your device toof access to the RAAZ. There is a lot to love. You will need to pay a one-time license to use it, but apart from that, it is one of the few Android applications paid I think it is Sincerely worth it. Outside if you're something like me, you're probably a lite with your passwords. They are all over the place, probably have several variants of a password and will be confused while starting session on things, and often confuse them. Not to mention, if it is the kind of boy to use the same password on several websites, it could be in an unpleasant surprise if someone manages to guess. Pasto Pastures clenched their free level, many users began looking. A BlowWenen as a decent alternative of the password password. While the application has a premium level, all the main features of the application remain completely free, including a secure password generator, synchronizing on all devices and more. You only really need to pay for application if you are looking for features, such as the authenticator of two built-in factors and file sharing, but otherwise, you will be served more than according to the BitWarden free level. The best part of all? Is open. Who does not love any good open open code software? Tasker Tasker is one of the most complex applications throughout this list, and has a bit of a steep learning curve, especially for beginners. But once you get the understanding of it, it is one of the most useful applications by there. You can automate almost all aspects of your smart phone use and make it work in the way you want. This will reduce a large amount of manual information and repetitive behavior by establishing automatic actions to the parameters and conditions you want. It is also a type Switzerland tool and serves as a solution to add an incredible functionality to its smartphone. If you can think about it, the Tasker can probably take it out. Developer: joaomgcd Price: $ 3.49 Background The Back Turtle Application is one of the Tools to customize your smart phone and make it truly yours. It has been my option for most of the wallpapers of my smart phone for several years, and it is not really so difficult to see why. You get a wide range of wallpapers to adapt to any type of including a section with cured wallpapers, as well as other contributed to the community. Apart from some collections of a € Premium a €, the application is completely free. If you want something different from the default wallpapers on your new device, Backdrops is an incredible place to start your search. Weather Underground Weather Underground is one of the best climate applications on Android. It is well organized and comes with a clean interface. It has everything you want in a meteorological application. You can see hyper-local meteorological prognostics, obtain sophisticated meteorological visualizations, and severe meteorologic alerts. Web Browsers A large web browser is an essential application for any Android telephone. After all, most of us spent a little time in a web browser. There are dozens of web browsers at the Google Play store, but not all are equal. Thus here are our best options for the best web browsers for Android at 2021. Chrome Google Chrome is an excellent web browser for most people. It is rapid and includes most of the features you expect from a web browser. In addition, it is pre-installed in most Android devices these days. So you do not have to look for it at the Google Play store. In terms of features, you receive synchronization support, a password manager, a Lite mode to save data, Safe DNS support, and more. Firefox Firefox is one of the few browsers that still uses its own browser engine a € "Gecko. So if you are looking for a true Chrome alternative, Firefox is your best bet. It is rapid and pack all the basic browser elements. One of its outstanding aspects is additional support. While the browser does not support all the accessories available in the desktop version, you get a limited selection but of recommended add-ons. Brave Brave is an open chrome-based open code web browser. It focuses on privacy and comes with built-in functions to block advertisements and trackers. You also receive synchronization support, background video playback, and the usual fundamentals. In addition, the browser allows users to run optional advertisements and get rewarded in Bassian basic attention (BATs), which is Brave's own cryptocurrency. Best Android Apps for VideoIn video, we'll mention some of our favorite apps for streaming movies, TV series and content from your favorite content producers, as well as giving you the option to easily and painlessly play your downloaded content locally. These are our top three choices for Netflix video apps I'm sure Netflix doesn't need a presentation. It is one of the largest media companies at the moment and its video streaming service of the same name has almost 200 million users. You can find all kinds of movies and TV series, new and old, from fantasy to action, through horror and suspense. It is one of the best video streaming services on the planet, and one of the largest. The Android app gives you access to all the features of the service on the go, including watching your favorite shows on your phone, up to the highest quality your device can handle. Developer: Netflix, Inc. Price: Free + Disney+ It seems to have been around for a long time, but actually, Disney's streaming service, Disney+, was released in late 2019. It was a big change of direction for Disney, which hosted many of their movies and series on other platforms like Netflix, so they could change direction and launch a center for all of Disney. It was a successful move, as Disney+ is now one of the most used streaming services in the world. Disney+ gives you access to Disney, Fox, Marvel and Star Wars content, all from the same app. Best of all, it's also cheaper than the competition, at only $6.99 a month. Developer: Disney Price: Free + YouTube YouTube is the largest video platform on the planet right now. You can watch content from your favorite YouTubers, find educational videos, watch music videos and even upload your content if you like that kind of thing, as well as access your creator tools. YouTube application supports video playback on the resolution available for your smartphone, supports HDR video and several features such as photo image mode (PIP). Developer: Google LLC Price: VLC free VLC is probably the best application to watch videos downloaded locally on your smartphone. It is quite large on a PC, and is also available for Android, with the same set of features. It supports playing a wide variety of videos, endless formats (no matter how old or non-standard they are), and closed caps (if you have a separate subtitle file). What's more, it's completely free and has no ads to hurt your media experience. Developer: Videolabs Price: Free + Music & AudioNext, we will present some applications for music and audio. From the subscription services that give you access to millions of songs and podcasts hosted online, to something that allows you to play your locally downloaded music the way you are supposed to, there are many alternatives in the Google Play store. Here are our 3 best options for the best Android applications for music. Spotify Spotify is probably one of the best music streaming services available in terms of features. I've tried a handful of them, and there's always something I miss about Spotify. The recommendation algorithm of the application is quite punctual and allows you to discover more music every day, either within the genre you like or a completely different music genre. It also supports many different platforms, cured playlists are updated every day, has podcasts, and much more. It is also totally free to use as long as it is willing to deal with ads and certain limitations, and there is also a paid version that gives you the full experience for a monthly subscription fee. Apple Music Apple Music is one of the few services Apple decided to launch in Android, and the app itself is quite good. The Android app is quite well polished and rich in features, the service has a wider selection of music than Spotify, Spotify. It admits features such as live letters for songs, unloading music locally and more. In the form of Spotify, Apple's music does not have a free plan and requires it to register for an Apple identification if you no longer have one, but it has a free 3 month trial that allows you to try it without restrictions. In my opinion, he keeps his land pretty well compared to Spotify. Developer: Apple Price: Free + YouTube Music Google launched the YouTube music as a replacement for the aging of Google Play Music, but has also managed to endure its own music transmission service. While the first version of the YouTube application oriented towards music was started, it has spilled as a fully foiled music transmission application. It can be used for free, such as Spotify, with a world warnings as as advertisements, without bottom transmission, etc. cetera, while full experience will turn $ 9.99 per month. It has improved a lot since the last time I used it, and it is definitely worth looking at anyone who seek to obtain a new music transmission service. Developer: Google LLC Price: Free Poweramp PowerAMP is one of the best applications to play your music locally in your smartphone. It is probably not going to win any prize for the user interface design, but Poweramp focuses on the function on form, and a €
