My friend Mt got his old Mobo lying around (IPM17-TP) was pre-built with a 6700K I7 and GTX 980 TI, so I guess I can use it with an I5 7600K and a GTX 1070 but are there any problems I should consider? If you have the stuff that has been built with it stick with the I7 6700K is not making much going to the I5 7600K and the gpu are not a kind of envy but watching and listening to the 1070 are quite similar in performance and when you read it the main reason to go to 1070 is more efficient and a little better. If you don't have the pre-built stuff, the 1070s will work on that board, but I don't know about the i5. Can I use an HP Envy mob for my construction? I only have the mobo ok hmmm According to me I just want to get a new board yes they are expensive but it i s better in the long term and I don't really think the board supports the kaby lakes since they like to limit the cpu. 0 I can use an HP mobo mobo. My body? Okay, I didn't argue like that, but I'm sure you're right. You'll need more research. I was hoping to save about 120 euros but if the cpu is not running 100% it is not worth Page 3 hi guys. I have information D157tm mob and I'll probably get a 1050th gigabyte for that. The only problem is, I see it's pci 3.0 while the mobo can only go towards pci 2.0. Will it still work? 0 The video card will still work, it will work at the speed of PCI 2.0. 0 The video card will still work, it will work at the speed of PCI 2.0. So it's gonna be slow? Page 4 Hey So basically, my first year of GPU stopped working, the fans stopped spinning and the GPU hadn't been detected, this on an Asus Z97-A motherboard. So what I did was I checked the GPU and now I got my money back. What worries me is if the problem really is in the PCIe lane, is there anything I can say from the birth? Even a broken PCIe port can cause damage I'm afraid that putting my new 1070 in that slot can damage or kill him somehow. I was right, right. With all my stuff, I doubt the PCIe lane is broken the way I ran it. Thanks 0 There's virtually no risk. And there's no way to tell for sure if the mobster is the culprit, unless you actually insert the card. If you are really so worried, it is always possible to test the card in another plant before installation, but IMO, there is really no need for it. There's practically no risk.
