Getting negative, spammy, self-promotional, or inappropriate comments on a post you published on Facebook is inevitable. Worse still, you're not sure whether to slap back, block the person or ignore the comment altogether, especially if you manage a Facebook group or page for a brand. Fortunately, Facebook allows you to hide comments that may hurt your reputation or business. In this guide, we'll show you how to hide comments on Facebook and what happens when you do. When to Hide a Comment on Facebook When you get an unpleasant or offensive comment on your Facebook post, the first instinct is usually to delete the comment. However, not all instances of such comments require deletion - you can respond to some and ignore others. Hiding a comment is easier to do than deleting it or banning the creator entirely from the Facebook page. Some users just want to promote their own products through your post, spam it with unsafe links or leave comments with inappropriate content or language. You could delete such comments, but unless you ban the user from your page, they'll just keep coming back. Even so, it can be hard to keep up with all the comments especially if the page has lots of engaged followers. While it's okay to remove any negative sentiments from your posts that can potentially hurt your Facebook page, not all of them should be hidden. Users may quickly notice that you delete their comments, particularly those that criticize your business, and you may end up losing their trust or loyalty. Others may get agitated or angry if you delete their comments, leave scathing reviews, or vocalize their opinions on their own pages - and you can't control it. Hiding comments can help you reduce collateral damage and benefit you. What Happens When You Hide a Comment on Facebook When you hide a comment on a Facebook post, you're essentially keeping other users from seeing the comment except for the person who posted it and their friends. Unlike deleting a comment, where the user will know that you removed it, they won't know when the comment is hidden, and you can avoid potential fallout. You can still unhide or delete the comment later or report it especially if it violates Facebook community standards. Before you hide a comment, find out whether you can address it. Oftentimes, a user may leave a negative comment out of frustration. Turning a bad experience into a good one could change a distraught follower into a loyal fan or customer. You can also address an issue professionally and show other users that you're ready to resolve any complaints they may have no matter how grave they seem. Many users would be willing to move to a private message to discuss their issue further and you can use that opportunity to assist them. If you must hide a comment, make sure you catch it before it gets much visibility or engagement. How to Hide a Comment on Facebook Whether you're using a computer or mobile device, you can hide a comment on Facebook in a few easy steps. Computer On your Windows PC or Mac, you'll need to open Facebook on a browser and then hide the comment from your post. Go to the Facebook post and select the three dots to the right of the comment you want to hide. Android If you're using an Android smartphone or tablet, you can hide a comment on Facebook via the Facebook app. Go to the Facebook post, tap and hold the comment you want to hide and then tap Hide comment. iOS You can also hide a comment on Facebook on your iPhone or iPad via the Facebook app. Go to the Facebook post and tap on the comment you want to hide and then select Hide. In all three instances - computer or mobile device - you can ban the user or page that created the comment. You can also report the comment if it goes against Facebook's Community Standards. Reduce Collateral Damage Besides the situations and strategies we've mentioned, there's a lot more to consider when hiding comments on Facebook. Make sure you have good reasons for hiding the comment, address it if other users ask about it, and always consider the most productive alternative before taking action. Facebook's head of security policy said the company is putting into place security measures for users in Afghanistan, including hiding "friends" lists and adding a tool to quickly lock down accounts. Nathaniel Gleicher said in a thread on Twitter that Facebook made the changes based on feedback from activists, journalists, and civil society groups. As the Taliban have regained control of the country over the past week, the group has found ways to push its messages on social media, despite being banned by YouTube and Facebook. NBC News reported Friday that people in Afghanistan fearful of the Taliban were deleting from their social media accounts and phones any photos that could show a connection to Western countries, the former Afghan government, or the Afghan military. People in Afghanistan will now have access to a one-click tool to lock down their Facebook accounts. "When their profile is locked, people who aren't their friends can't download or share their profile photo or see posts on their timeline," Gleicher explained. It's also removed the ability for users to view and search "Friends" lists for Facebook accounts in Afghanistan, to protect people from being targeted, he added. On Facebook-owned Instagram, Gleicher said, the company is adding pop-up alerts in Afghanistan that include steps for protecting accounts. He also urged people with friends and family in Afghanistan to tighten their own visibility settings. Gleicher added that it's added a special operations center "to respond to new threats as they emerge." The company is watching the situation closely, he said, "and will take steps to help protect people in real time." Fábio Principe/Shutterstock.com If you don't want people to see your Facebook friends, you can hide your friends list from them. This guide will show you how to do that on Facebook on both desktop and mobile. Note: You only need to hide your Facebook friends list once, on either desktop or mobile. The change will apply to all your signed-in devices automatically. Hide Facebook Friends List From Everyone or Specific People On Facebook, you can hide your friends list from everyone, specific people, or custom people lists that you have created. This gives you great control over who can see your friends. Keep in mind, though, that people can still see your mutual friends, even if you've hidden the friends list from everyone. RELATED: How to Share Facebook Posts with Only Certain Friends Hide Your Facebook Friends List on Desktop On a desktop computer like Windows, Mac, Linux, or Chromebook, use the Facebook website to make your friends list private. To start, open a web browser on your computer and launch Facebook. In the site's top-right corner, click the down-arrow icon. In the menu that opens after clicking the down-arrow icon, select "Settings & Privacy." In the "Settings & Privacy" menu, click "Settings." You will arrive on a "Settings" page. From the sidebar to the left, select "Privacy." This opens Facebook's privacy settings page. On the right pane, you will see a "How People Find and Contact You" section. In this section, next to "Who Can See Your Friends List," click "Edit." At the bottom of the "Who Can See Your Friends List" section, click the drop-down menu to select who can see your friends. If you'd like to hide your friends list from everyone, then choose "Only Me" from the drop-down menu. This ensures only you can view the friends list. Feel free to select any other option from the drop-down menu, depending on who you want to allow to see your friends. Facebook automatically saves and syncs your changes across all your devices. You are all set. Did you know you can also restrict specific friends from seeing your posts without unfriending them? Hide Your Facebook Friends List From Mobile If you are on an iPhone, iPad, or Android phone, use the Facebook app to specify who can see your friends list. To do so, first, open the Facebook app on your phone. In the app's top-right corner, tap the three horizontal lines. You will see a "Menu" page. Scroll this page all the way down, then tap "Settings & Privacy." From the "Settings & Privacy" menu, select "Settings." You will land on a "Settings & Privacy" page. Scroll down to the "Audience and Visibility" section, then tap "How People Find and Contact You." Tap "Who Can See Your Friends List." A "Friends List" page will open allowing you to choose who can see your friends. To hide your list from everyone, select the "Only Me" option. You are free to choose any other option if you want. Facebook will automatically save your changes, and your friends list is now hidden from everyone. And that's how you control one more aspect of your social media life! Want to hide your WhatsApp Status from specific friends? You can do that, too. RELATED: How to Hide Your WhatsApp Status From Specific Friends Some people on Facebook may opt to hide their friends list from you. WonderHowTo shares some tricks on revealing those "private" lists. Once you have your target picked out, the process is pretty simple. Follow these steps to start uncovering their friends: To start, you'll need to do a little detective work. Identify a probable friend of your intended target. Think of where your target works, groups they could be members of, and people they might associate themselves with. If you don't anything to go on, use Facebook's Graph Search feature to find potential friends. Once you've nailed down a friend of your target, you need to find out both of their account ID names. You can find these by going to their Facebook page and looking at the end of the URL. It will read "With both users' IDs, insert them into a URL that looks like this: that search, you'll see every friend that they have in common. From there, it's a process of elimination until you uncover all of your target's friends. If they have 300 friends and your search came up with 50 friends in common, you know there are still 250 friends to identify. Repeat the process to reveal them all, but it should be easier once you've discovered the first round of Facebook friends. Chances are you don't need to see their whole friends list, but if you do, there's also a script that'll automate the process for you at the link below. This logical approach to uncovering hidden friends doesn't break any rules and is easy to do if you have a little time.
